Portfolio Comments

The last twelve months have proven to be extremely uncertain times in international investment markets. The "knock on" effect of the US sub-prime into Europe and the broader global markets is now well entrenched. This, in conjunction with global inflationary fears centered on energy and food prices continue to add uncertainty and dissent amongst international interest rate authorities.

Domestically issues related to Eskom and ever rising inflation (CPIX March Year on Year figure now at a 5 year high) dominate the landscape. However, we remain cognizant of the fact that based on long term averages; the JSE currently represents reasonable value and will accordingly continue to monitor global and domestic risk lead indicators.

Looking forward over the next six months we remain concerned about domestic inflationary fears and the current account deficit and have therefore positioned the portfolio in a manner that includes the maximum offshore weighting, albeit marginally overweight fixed interest instruments.
